CORDER ON BOOM

The Buying of Kierstead Mine Causes Business Interest to Liven Up—Much Building.

Corder, May 14, Special. It is reported here that a company composed of four or five of the leading business men of this city have bargained for the mine and other property of the Kierstead Coal Company. This mine is located 3/4 mile west of town and has not been in operation for four years, in consequence of which it has partially caved in and the coal could hardly be mined from the present shaft without much work of cleaning out the caved portions. To the coal in this shaft it is 26 feet, but owing to a slope in the drift, another shaft sunk near the old one, to prevent the work of cleaning out the caved parts, would have to be about 100 feet deep. It is further rumored that the new company will sink another hole southeast of the present mine and will take advantage of the old entries which are in good condition.

When the Kierstead mine was in operation about 60 men were employed, though more could have been used. The vein of coal is about 20 inches, and is said to be easier mining than the other mines near here. If this mine is opened or another one is sunk near it, the town will boom and many out of town miners will be attracted here. This will mean more business to the town, which, with the farming industry is bound to make the town grow.

Corder certainly seems on the road to prosperity. In nearly every case where frame buildings have been burned out by fire, brick buildings are to be erected. Vacant houses are rare and are things of the past. The signs of movement and progress are out on every corner. The same spirit that prompted the directors of the Corder Creamery Company to install a new plant and new equipment in their line; that prompted Blevins and Miller to install a permanent picture show; that has prompted many retired farmers to locate and build here, is prompting the movements here now. It is the spirit of progress.

James Humphrey has bargained for 59 front feet on Lafayette street just south of Frank Schulz, and made the first payment to H. G. Asbury of Higginsville, to hold the bargain, Monday. Mr. Humphrey will build a building of cement blocks and will divide the structure into two store rooms and a barber shop. Though his plans are not complete Mr. Humphrey said Tuesday that he was figuring on making the building a two-story instead of one, and using the upstairs of the entire building as an opera house. This would make a suitable theater whose dimensions would be 75 by 59 feet. It is rumored that two new business firms are awaiting the erection of the building and will start into business upon the completion of the building. Mr. Humphrey will use the third room of the building for his barber shop, which is now located in the American hotel. The concrete blocks used in the new building will be manufactured in Corder.

Frank Meirand got a contract and began work Monday on rebuilding the brick buildings, the property of Fritz Langkahr, which were recently damaged by fire. That portion of the building occupied by Humphrey Bros' barber shop has been rented by the Corder Journal and the part used as a cafe will be occupied by Blevins and Miller's pool room. This was one of the nicest brick structures in town.

and will be rebuilt as it stood before the fire.

R. E. Miller moved into the James Jones house Saturday and the Miller house was torn down. Work was started Wednesday on the foundation of a fine new residence to be built where the old one stood. The work will be pushed and the home completed at as early date as possible.

The carpenter work on the residence of Emmett Lee is progressing rapidly. Mr. Lee and family are living in a portion of the old residence while the new is being built.

Parker's Carnival

The Parker Shows, which will furnish the amusement features for the carnival to be presented under the auspices of the Local Order of Moose affords one of the best and most notable examples in the history of the amusement world of what brains, executive ability and modern business methods, coupled with an application of sound ideas, can accomplish for an amusement enterprise. Entering the field when carnival companies were generally looked upon with more or less disfavor, brought about by the loose business methods employed, and the lax system upon everything therein was run, C. W. Parker, the owner and guiding spirit of the Parker shows, determined to put his organization on a firm and legitimate footing by applying only clean and up-to-date methods and tolerating no favoritism or misrepresentations on the part of his agent or employees. With the result that his company soon came to be recognized as a thoroughly reputable and reliable one.

Another reason for the great success that has been attained by the Parker Shows is the fact that Mr. Parker has always realized that the more complete the organization of any enterprise, the more complete and effective the control, and with this idea in mind aimed to employ the most efficient aides, who have always made it possible for the management of the Parker Shows to guarantee a cleaner, better organized, better equipped and better conducted carnival organization than any other company of a like order before the public.

The aggregation of features of the Parker Shows for this season's tour is the largest ever gathered together in the history of the carnival business, and compares favorably with that of any of the big circuses. No expense has been spared to secure the newest, best and most novel attractions possible, and it is not an exaggeration to state, that with their complete and elaborate equipment, a promoting and directing organization of equal managerial strength, that the Parker Shows will prove a new epoch in the carnival business.
